

International Augmentative & Alternative Communication (AAC) Awareness Month is an annual designation observed in October.

Join us for the Morning Tea

Did you know that in Australia 1 in 7 people have communication difficulties?

Many of these people will benefit from communication aids to get their messages across.

A communication aid could be a communication board with pictures and symbols, an electronic communication device (a specialised speech generating device or mainstream device such as a Tablet) or the use of Key Word Sign. The use of these resources is formally known as Augmentative and Alternative Communication (AAC).
