Charles D. Canham, Jonathan J. Cole, William K. Lauenroth, 2021-04-13 Quantitative models are crucial to almost every area of ecosystem science. They provide a logical structure that guides and informs empirical observations of ecosystem processes. They play a particularly crucial role in synthesizing and integrating our understanding of the immense diversity of ecosystem structure and function. Increasingly, models are being called on to predict the effects of human actions on natural ecosystems. Despite the widespread use of models, there exists intense debate within the field over a wide range of practical and philosophical issues pertaining to quantitative modeling. This book, which grew out of a gathering of leading experts at the ninth Cary Conference, explores those issues. The book opens with an overview of the status and role of modeling in ecosystem science, including perspectives on the long-running debate over the appropriate level of complexity in models. This is followed by eight chapters that address the critical issue of evaluating ecosystem models, including methods of addressing uncertainty. Next come several case studies of the role of models in environmental policy and management. A section on the future of modeling in ecosystem science focuses on increasing the use of modeling in undergraduate education and the modeling skills of professionals within the field. The benefits and limitations of predictive versus observational models are also considered in detail. Written by stellar contributors, this book grants access to the state of the art and science of ecosystem modeling. Scientific and Technical Aerospace Reports, 1990 Technical Bulletin West Virginia University. Gene E. Likens, 2012-12-06 The Cary Conferences, as we have envisaged them, are different from most scientific meetings in that they provide a forum for major issues in ecology from a more philosophical point of view. It appears to many of us that ecologists have limited opportunities to come together in small groups to address in a more philosophical way some of the major questions and issues that matter very much to the future of humankind and to us as ecologists. Moreover, we hope that the setting of the Mary Flagler Cary Arboretum promotes strong interaction and discussion between conference participants with a minimum of distraction. We are proud to make our facilities available for such meetings and we hope that over the years these conferences might provide direction and leadership for the whole field of ecology. We have the broad goal of attempting to advance the field of ecology by bringing together leading ecologists and other scientists to address major issues. The first Cary Conference in 1985 considered the status and future of ecosystem science. This first conference was rather loosely structured but was successful in stimulating discussion, ideas, and enthusiasm. Likens et al. 1987. The goals for this second Cary Conference in 1987 were 1) to identify the roles of long-term studies in ecology, 2) to identify the options for
