Thackston,1974      Effect of Geographical Location on Cooling Pond Requirements and Performance Edward L. Thackston, Frank L. Parker, Vanderbilt University. Department of Environmental and Water Resources Engineering,1971 The energy budget approach to cooling ponds has been outlined and applied to cooling ponds Monthly average weather data from 88 stations throughout the U S were used to calculate equilibrium temperatures heat exchange coefficients and amount of cooling in various sized ponds receiving the effluent from a standard power plant of 1000 mw capacity both for average and extreme weater conditions The data for each station is shown on a chart and the variation of these results across the U S is depicted by a series of 28 maps of the U S with contours connecting equal values of the parameters The results may also be used to estimate cooling pond performance for other sized power plants The maps disclose variations across the U S on a given date of up to 55 F in equilibrium temperature up to 100% difference in heat exchange coefficients up to 50% difference in heat lost from a given sized pond and up to 200% difference in the size of a pond necessary to produce an equal cooling effect      The Encyclopaedia Britannica ,1842      The Encyclopaedia Britannica, Or Dictionary of Arts, Sciences, and General Literature ,1853      United States Congressional Serial Set Catalog ,1993      The Encyclopaedia Britannica Anonymous,2023-11-20 Reprint of the original first published in 1875      Research Awards Index ,1980      The Encyclopaedia Britannica Thomas Stewart Traill,1853
